GRADUATE TEACHING & ADVISING

Graduate Courses:

ENGL 560/561: Seminar in Technology and Culture (Spring 2020, Spring 2017). Graduate seminar in support of the Certificate in Digital Technology and Culture with a materialist approach to contemporary issues of digital politics and culture, including concerns of ubiquitous computing, surveillance, and conflict.

ENGL 597: Literatures and Rhetorics of Modern War (Fall 2018). Cross-disciplinary graduate seminar examining the discourse around contemporary conflicts in Iraq and Afghanistan from multiple perspectives.

ENGL 501: Seminar in the Teaching of Writing (Fall 2017). Graduate seminar required for all new teaching associates designed as an introduction to the range of tactics and strategies for good composition instruction.

ENGL 509: Seminar in Classical Rhetoric: Rhetoric Under Empire (Fall 2014). Graduate seminar with a cultural materialist approach to ancient rhetorics, exploring not only classical rhetorical theories but also how those theories played out in diverse ancient cultures under highly unequal relations of power.

ENGL 548: Seminar in Critical and Cultural Theory: Theories of Technology (Fall 2013). Graduate seminar that used theoretical examinations of technology to introduce students to major works in critical and cultural theory.

UNDERGRADUATE TEACHING

ENGL/DTC 356: Information Structures (Spring 2020, Spring 2019, Fall 2016, Fall 2015, Fall 2013, Spring 2013). Overhauled and redesigned for a post-Snowden age in Summer 2016. Examines how the social, cultural, legal, economic, and political roles of information and data structures relate to research with and on electronic and digital sources and subjects.

ENGL/DTC 375: Language, Texts, and Technologies. (Fall 2019, Spring 2018, Spring 2015, Spring 2014). Explores the interrelationships among technology, communication, and composing practices from a historical point of view, with a particular focus on various forms of literacies.

DTC 101: Introduction to Digital Technology and Culture (Summer 2019, Fall 2018, Fall 2017). Offers an introduction to digital technology and culture that integrates literary studies, rhetoric, art and design, critical culture studies, and sociology to prepare students for the technical and cultural challenges of the 21st century.

ENGL/DTC 476: Digital Literacies (Spring 2019, Spring 2018). Investigates the development and use of new technological literacies as they affect communication and learning, exploring the meanings and values of those literacies and their associated ideologies across multiple cultural, political, and educational contexts.

ENGL 101: College Composition (Fall 2016, Spring 2016, Spring 2015, Spring 2013). Designed to further develop students' academic writing, critical thinking, rhetorical strategies, reading and library skills, this first-year composition course teaches the tactics, conventions, and habits of good writing.

ENGL 494: Advanced Topics in Literature: Digital Rhetorics and the Digital Humanities (Fall 2015). Capstone course exploring how the approaches English majors learn studying literature, rhetoric, and creative writing can engage the complexities and opportunities of digital technologies.

ENGL 495: Rhetoric of Science and Technology (Spring 2014). Teaches students how to communicate the complexities of scientific and technological work and research to specialized audiences in scientific and technological fields and also to diverse public audiences.

ENGL 302: Introduction to English Studies (Spring 2014, Fall 2013, Spring 2013: rhetoric unit). This unit of a team-taught upper-division requirement for the different English majors—creative writing, teaching, literature, and rhetoric & professional writing—introduces students to the core ideas and concepts of ancient and contemporary rhetorics.

ENGL 301: Writing and Rhetorical Conventions (Spring 2013, Fall 2012). Provides students with advanced practice in and study of style, argument, and other discourse conventions, and teaches students to adapt to diverse rhetorical situations and identify and build upon their own strengths as writers.
